CHURCH STATISTICS.

Growth of Various Denominations
According to Carroll's Figures.

CATHOLICS IN LEAD.

Their Increase Greatest and Episcopalians Come Next—All Churches Make Only 730,027 Gain During Last Years.

New York, Jan. 17.—Statistics on the growth of the churches of the United States in 1901, and the order of denominational rank in 1890 and 1901, have been completed by the Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, who was in charge of the religious statistics of the United States census of 1890. At the end of 1900 there were 27,360,610 members of all churches in the United States, according to Dr. Carroll's figures, and 28,090,637 at the end of 1901, a gain of 730,027 or 2.67 per cent, or greater than the gain in population, 2.18 per cent, the annual rate of increase in population from 1890 to 1900.

The Catholics lead with a present membership of 9,158,741, a gain of 468,083. Dr. Carroll rates the increase in Roman Catholic membership as too high and regards the figures as those of the growth of several years in a large proportion of the dioceses.

The percentage of growth in the Protestant Episcopal church, 4 per cent, Dr. Carroll regards as large. It is next to the Roman Catholic, the largest growth of the year, and was greatest in the eastern cities. The accessions to the Protestant Episcopal church were from Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists, Congregationalists and other denominations rather than from the non-church public.

The disciples of Christ, whose membership is almost wholly in the middle west, has almost doubled its followers since 1890.

Of the Christians, Dr. Carroll says that he took his statistics from the mother church at Boston, while his figures are much less than some scientists claim.

The statistician found 22 different kinds of Lutherans in the United States. The total Lutheran growth last year was 35,101, much of which was in the independent synods, that of Iowa being 21,000, while others lost heavily.

Of his own body, the Methodists, he says that with a total membership of 2,762,691 the Methodist (North) increased but 16,50. Last year, however, many evangelical movements, in which the Methodists led, were undertaken, and it has been claimed that 600,000 new members were brought in.

It is Dr. Carroll's belief that there are 300,000 Mormons in or about Utah, and it is stated that 65,000 converts were made last year by 1400 missionaries in the east.

A fact brought out by Dr. Carroll is the tenacity of religious bodies, no matter what the discouragement.

There are twelve kinds of Presbyterians. In 1900 the twelfth kind had only one minister and a handful of members. Last year the minister died, but the handful of members are still faithful, and probably will remain so. They call themselves Reformed Presbyterians in the United States and Canada.

Successful Skin Grafting.

Chicago, Jan. 17.—In an hour's time Dr. Dorsey Hecht, before a clinic at the Post Graduate hospital, cut bits of cuticle from the arms and legs of 15 young women, and covered a burned and livid face with fresh, healthy epidermis. The patient is Miss Helen Peck, 16 years old, whose face was terribly burned by an explosion of gasoline. Three times the number of young women chosen volunteered to make the sacrifice for their suffering friend.

Fire at Sweetwater.

Sweetwater, Tex., Jan. 17.—Fire here destroyed the following property: Lang Aycock, saloon; F. M. Price, meat market; Simon O'Keefe, barber shop; Cardwell's restaurant, Williamson's restaurant and Painter's livery stable. All were frame buildings with no insurance. The origin of the fire is not known. The stock of the Sweetwater Mercantile company was damaged by moving.

Charged With Embezzlement.

Denver, Jan. 17.—At the request of Chief of Police O'Neal of Chicago, the police of this city have taken into custody William H. Howard on the charge of larceny and embezzlement. It is said that the charge is made at the instance of the First National bank of Chicago. The arrest was made at a rooming house where Howard was living under the name of Hill.

Shooting at Chickasaw.

Fort Worth, Tex., Jan. 17.—Report received here gives meager particulars of a shooting scrape at Chickasaw, in which a man named Chambers is reported killed. The difficulty is said to have been the outgrowth of a dispute among whiskey peddlers. It seems one of them had given the federal officers tips that illegal traffic was being carried on.

Prominent Lawyer Dead.

The Dalles, Ore., Jan. 17.—Hon. Jas. B. Condon, leading lawyer and prominent citizen here, died, aged 74 years.

RESULTED SERIOUS.

Five Tongue River Indians Dead Over Previous Trouble.

Washington, Jan. 17.—Five Indians were killed during the recent trouble at the Tongue River agency in Montana, according to the official report received by Commissioner of Indian Affairs Jones from Agent Clifford.

The agent recommends that 50 men from the United States army, under the command of an officer, be stationed permanently at Camp Merritt, near the agency. Now there are only 11 men, under command of a sergeant, at Camp Merritt.

The report shows that the recent trouble began on the 4th inst., when two Indian police reported that an Indian named White, the center figure in the affair, had fresh beef in his cabin, coincident with the unlawful killing and mutilation of several head of cattle east of Tongue river. White refused to surrender and wanted to fight, and attempt was made to arrest him. White shot and killed an Indian policeman named Bullard and killed one horse and wounded another. The police were repulsed. White threatened to raid the agency, and the entire police force was held in reserve for some time. On the 8th inst. White and his wife, son and daughter were found. It was believed that the son opposed his father surrendering himself and killed the father and the others of the family and then committed suicide.

BELIEVE HIM KERN.

The Man Under Arrest at New Orleans for Scheme to Defraud.

New Orleans, Jan. 17.—Although Manners still denies that he is Kern, the belief is growing stronger that he is the right man. A piece of corroborative evidence is in his possession of a toilet set marked "M. E. T." which is supposed to belong to Mr. Thebaud's brother, though Manning says it is his own initials reversed, a practice which he says is not uncommon. He has engaged counsel but no legal steps have been taken in his behalf.

Klein makes a statement that he and Rogers know Kern and called on him at the hotel. He did not deny his identity and they were frank enough to call his attention to knowledge of an $8000 reward. He then told them there was over $8000 worth of jewelry in the trunk and instructed them how to get away with it. He said he would collect damages from the hotel and meet them in Atlanta for a further division of the spoils. When they broke open the trunk it only contained a few hundred dollars worth of stuff, and the police pursuit prevented the Atlanta trip. They became convinced that the alleged Kern had simply fooled them in order to escape, and so gave him away. They hope, by proving that they did not steal anything, simply carrying out the man's orders, to go scot free.

Sheriff Marrero, who is holding Manners, says the description fit even to the scars and has been notified that Mr. Thebaud and New York detectives are on the way to New Orleans to identify the man.

ESCAPED CONVICTS.

The Desperadoes Who Killed Sheriff Smith and Deputy Beck.

Guthrie, O. T., Jan. 17.—Warren Bennett, deputy United States marshal for the Osage nation, says the men who killed Sheriff Smith and Deputy Beck near Anadarko are two of the fugitives from the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth, five of whom are still at large.

Bennett has been on the trail of the fellows for three weeks and ran them out of the Osage nation only last week. At that time he telegraphed Sheriff Smith at Anadarko and told him to be on the lookout for the pair as they were desperate characters to deal with. Bennett says beyond any doubt Smith knew the men whom he attacked in the Indian hut, and this made him more anxious to capture them.

Governor Ferguson has offered a reward of $500 each for the arrest of the men who murdered the Anadarko officers.

The robbers camped Wednesday night far from the Chickasaw line and proceeded again Thursday morning, being last seen near Apache. By this time they are in the Indian Territory.

Three hundred men are in pursuit, but are disorganized. A dozen sheriffs and United States marshals are in the field. There are four outlaws and they have five horses.

Green Bailey Killed and His Son Badly Wounded Near Graphic.

Van Buren, Ark., Jan. 17.—The feud existing between the Edwards and Bailey families in this county has culminated in the shooting and probable killing of Green Bailey and the wounding of Bailey's son, Green. Edwards, his wife and son were passing the Edwards farm near Graphic when the old trouble was brought up. Oscar Sherman, who is a member of the Edwards family, shot Green Bailey in the back of the head, inflicting what is considered a fatal wound, also shooting Bailey's son through the leg. Sherman was placed under arrest and is being held to await the result of the senior Bailey's injuries. The scene of the shooting is in the mountains some distance from the city, and information is difficult to obtain.

Regarding the play at the opera house tonight, an advance notice says: "Naughty Anthony," David Belasco's laughable comedy, which is to be seen at the Grand opera house tonight, owes much of its success to the fine cast that interprets it. Marie Doro, who is seen as "Cora," the hosiery model, is acknowledged to be the prettiest and most graceful young comedienne on the stage. Will F. Phillips, who plays the title role, "Anthony," was the hit of the London production of "The Whirl of the Town," a New York Casino success, and Patti Rosa, who appears as "Winnie," the professor's maid, is well known to our theater-goers. She is a daughter of the late Patti Rosa, and inherits all her mother's brilliancy and talent. Miss Doro and Miss Rosa's songs are features of "Naughty Anthony," which is claimed to be the most laughable farce now before the public. It has the seal of a New York success, having run for a 150 nights at the Herald Square theatre there.

HOLD UP A BOLD ONE.

Drummer Prevented from Firing upon a Robber by the Conductor.

Fort Smith, Ark., Jan. 17.—The robbery of the Kansas City Southern passenger train Wednesday was a bold affair, but the reward secured by the robbers did not help them much.

The robbers flagged the train between Spiro and Redland. While two of the seven men covered the engineer and fireman with revolvers, others forced a porter, who had appeared on the steps of the forward coach, to uncouple the baggage car from the rest of the train.

John Block, a travelling salesman from Fort Smith, alighted from the train and was about to fire upon one of the robbers when he was prevented by Conductor Sullivan, who feared that the men would fire into the passenger coaches.

The baggage car was uncoupled and the engineer compelled to pull up the road a distance of about one mile. There the robbers, after disarming the messenger, went through the baggage and mail cars. Their work finished, one of the robbers handed the messenger the revolver taken from him, and all made for the timber.

Postoffice officials here deny that any registered mail was taken, and the express officials say that one package containing three dollars covers their loss.

SATURDAY, JAN. 18, 1902.

East Texas continues to improve. The people of Newton county have voted to build a $25,000 court house.

The railroad commission has adopted a new tariff, scaling merchandise rates 20 per cent., and effective in twenty days.

The M. K. & T. may extend its San Antonio line to Brownsville. There is certainly no lack of activity in railroad building in Texas.

A Kansas City millinery firm advertises: "Our Hats are Husband Winners." And they might have added: "Papa's Purse Paralyzers."

Texas has no legislative session this year, but it has an investigating commission that is going to make more fun than a legislature of both houses with a strenuous lobby.—Ft. Worth Register.

The Houston & Texas Central is making preparation to extend its Austin and Northwestern branch to Lampasas. The people of that city have given right-of-way and depot grounds.

When the business men of any town put their shoulders to the wheel and help build up such organizations as the truck growers' association they are casting bread upon the waters with a "dead cinch" for its return four-fold.

Senator Harris introduced a bill in the Senate last Thursday for providing for government ownership of the telegraphs in the United States. It is understood that the Western Union and other telegraph companies have been seen, and consent to the program. These are doubtless to be paid enough to make it extremely interesting to them.

Regarding the play at the opera house tonight, an advance notice says: "Naughty Anthony," David Belasco's laughable comedy, which is to be seen at the Grand opera house tonight, owes much of its success to the fine cast that interprets it. Marie Doro, who is seen as "Cora," the hosiery model, is acknowledged to be the prettiest and most graceful young comedienne on the stage. Will F. Phillips, who plays the title role, "Anthony," was the hit of the London production of "The Whirl of the Town," a New York Casino success, and Patti Rosa, who appears as "Winnie," the professor's maid, is well known to our theater-goers. She is a daughter of the late Patti Rosa, and inherits all her mother's brilliancy and talent. Miss Doro and Miss Rosa's songs are features of "Naughty Anthony," which is claimed to be the most laughable farce now before the public. It has the seal of a New York success, having run for a 150 nights at the Herald Square theatre there.

HOLD UP A BOLD ONE.

Drummer Prevented from Firing upon a Robber by the Conductor.

Fort Smith, Ark., Jan. 17.—The robbery of the Kansas City Southern passenger train Wednesday was a bold affair, but the reward secured by the robbers did not help them much.

The robbers flagged the train between Spiro and Redland. While two of the seven men covered the engineer and fireman with revolvers, others forced a porter, who had appeared on the steps of the forward coach, to uncouple the baggage car from the rest of the train.

John Block, a traveling salesman from Fort Smith, alighted from the train and was about to fire upon one of the robbers when he was prevented by Conductor Sullivan, who feared that the men would fire into the passenger coaches.

The baggage car was uncoupled and the engineer compelled to pull up the road a distance of about one mile. There the robbers, after disarming the messenger, went through the baggage and mail cars. Their work finished, one of the robbers handed the messenger the revolver taken from him, and all made for the timber.

Postoffice officials here deny that any registered mail was taken, and the express officials say that one package containing three dollars covers their loss.

Hard Luck Story About Madison County.
The Eagle hopes that the following, from the Huntsville Correspondent of the Galveston News, is exaggerated, and we rather believe that it is:
Huntsville, Tex., Jan. 15.—It continues very dry in this section and from Madison county comes some distressing news about the condition of cattle and the scarcity of water. Pasture is short and lands heretofore furnishing fine range are said to be entirely bare. All creeks are dry and cattle are selling as low as $5 per head. In this county conditions are not nearly so bad. Farmers are going ahead with farm work and cattle are doing fairly well.

Champagne Imports in 1901.

Of a total of 319,243 cases imported by over thirty brands, George H. Mumm's Extra Dry aggregated 120,359, nearly 60,000 cases more than any other brand. Particular attention is called to the quality of this wine. It is very dry and resembles the famous 1889 vintage, being more delicate and breezy than the 1893. Immense reserves guarantee the maintenance of quality. This superior wine is offered for sale in Bryan by Taylor & Cox. 36

A Card.

Editor Eagle:
My Dear Sir:—Owing to the illness of Mr. Kearney, one of my stars, we were compelled to dismiss the audience at the Grand opera house Thursday night. It is a very unfortunate thing for Mr. Mike and myself, we both being losers. I trust you will advise the public through your paper of the state of affairs, as it is absolutely necessary that Mr. Mike should not lose the confidence of his patrons. By dismissing the audience, it may have a tendency to injure the next attraction; therefore I wish you would state the above facts and oblige, yours truly, J. M. Welch.

Fred Goodson was the victim of a painful and serious accident at the electric light and waterworks plant one day this week. While at work with pumping machinery he got his left foot caught in a chain and carried around the cog wheel on which the chain works. The cogs are large, partly admitting the foot into each of them as the wheel went around. This fact and the heavy soled shoe Mr. Goodson wore are all that saved his foot from being crushed off. As it was his foot was badly mashed and two toes broken.

MEN'S OUTFITTERS

Hard Luck Story About Madison County.

The Eagle, hopes that the following, from the Huntsville Correspondent of the Galveston News, is exaggerated, and we rather believe that it is:

Huntsville, Tex., Jan. 15.—It continues very dry in this section and from Madison county comes some distressing news about the condition of cattle and the scarcity of water. Pasturage is short and lands heretofore furnishing fine range are said to be entirely bare. All creeks are dry and cattle are selling as low as $5 per head. In this county conditions are not nearly so bad. Farmers are going ahead with farm work and cattle are doing fairly well.

Champagne Imports in 1901.

Of a total of 319,243 cases imported by over thirty brands, George H. Mumm's Extra Dry aggregated 120,359, nearly 60,000 cases more than any other brand. Particular attention is called to the quality of this wine. It is very dry and resembles the famous 1889 vintage, being more delicate and breezy than the 1893. Immense reserves guarantee the maintenance of quality. This superior wine is offered for sale in Bryan by Taylor & Cox.

Editor Eagle:
My Dear Sir:—Owing to the illness of Mr. Kearney, one of my stars, we were compelled to dismiss the audience at the Grand opera house Thursday night. It is a very unfortunate thing for Mr. Mike and myself, we both being losers. I trust you will advise the public through your paper of the state of affairs, as it is absolutely necessary that Mr. Mike should not lose the confidence of his patrons. By dismissing the audience, it may have a tendency to injure the next attraction; therefore I wish you would state the above facts and oblige, yours truly, J. M. Welch.

THE FIREMAN'S ...WOOLING

The Story of a Girl Who
Chose Not Wisely.

"Sit here, please," said Fanny as she stood with her shapely hands upon the back of a chair that she had drawn a little way out from the table. It was the boast of the proprietor that he had the handsomest lot of waitresses on the road, and the queen of the collection was Fanny McCann. That's how she happened to be head waitress, for she could not know much of the business. She had come to the place partly because her widowed mother was poor and partly to gratify a consuming desire to pose as the prettiest girl there, for she had been consulting her mirror.

The fireman frowned, but took a seat next to the proprietor of the Mint Julep. The fireman's face, newly washed and hardly rubbed, glistened in the glare of the electric light, and the same light played upon the jeweled hands and immaculate shirt front of the Julep man. The fireman bowed coldly, and the other, feeling a certain superiority in the matter of dress and personal appearance, smiled.

The head waitress, taking a position at one of the windows, stood looking at the two men, both of whom had made love to her. She had purposely seated them so as to get their faces in one frame, as it were, for she had been unable to orsake one and cleave to the other. She respected the fireman—she had loved him once and had acknowledged it to him—but she was dazzled by the handsome, well groomed proprietor of the Mint Julep. Once or twice the fireman ventured to look up, but each time he saw her gazing upon his rival, and his heart was filled with dread.

"What time shall I call?" he asked as Fanny handed him his ticket.

"Not before 9. I detest being first in a ballroom."

"Suppose we say 8:30? It will be 9 by the time we reach the hall."

"Nine," said Fanny, nodding at the Julep man as he passed out, with his chinchilla thrown gracefully over his shoulders.

"But I'm on the reception committee."

"Then go and 'recep' and come back for me. I shan't leave the house before 9. My, how gay you are!"

The fireman went out with a heavy heart. Fanny was getting on. She had not used such language to him before, and it cut him to the quick. He remembered how he had begged her to keep out of the eating house and tried to hint to her mother that the place was full of lures.

"It's only a short step in the direction of danger," he said. "A public dinner room, camp meeting, the skating rink, and—"

"Stop," said Fanny's mother. "I will not have you hint even that Fanny is capable of being bad."

And so the fireman had been powerless to prevent the pure young girl from putting herself in this position. Promptly at 9 o'clock he called for Fanny. She would be out in a moment, her mother said.

During the half hour in which he waited for the expiration of a woman's "moment" the fireman noticed a number of new pieces of furniture; also he noticed that Fanny's mother was a little reserved. Fanny herself, while amply deliberate, was irritable and nervous. Conversation seemed to go slowly with them, like a heavy train on an up grade.

When they entered the ballroom, the fiddlers were already fiddling, and they fell in line for the opening walk round.

Over in one end of the hall there was a bank of plants and ferns, loaned by leading citizens for the firemen's annual ball, and just in front of the oasis stood the Julep man, immaculate as ever and wearing the only evening dress suit in the room.

He was radiant and all the more so by comparison, for not a few of the respectable suits worn by the firemen and their friends were beginning to take on that unmistakable shine that comes with age.

"Oh, Isaac," exclaimed Mrs. Wolfstine to her husband, "what a beautiful young lady! Who is she?"

"She ees not what you say—a lady. She is waitress from zee eating house."

"And who is the handsome gentleman writing on her card?"

"He ees not one gentleman, my dear. He ees zee proprietor of zee Mint Julep."

Now Mrs. Wolfstine marveled that this man should be there dancing with the daughters of the best families in the growing western town. But why should he not be there? Every fireman on the division had sold or tried to sell him a ticket for the annual ball. The fireman was surprised upon taking Fanny's card to find that his rival had already written upon it.

A half an hour later he took the card again to select a number and found the face of it black with "Julep, Julep, Julep."

This man had been called by that name so much that he had come to answer to it and write it. Indeed, few people in the place knew that he had another name.

It was two hours after midnight when the fireman opened the gate in front of the little frame cottage where the girl's mother lived.

"Well," said the girl, putting the gate between them, "was the ball a success?"

"For some people it was a decided success."

"And for others?"

"A flat failure."

"That's too bad," said Fanny, with provoking carelessness.

"Oh, I don't know. Where there are so many smooth runs and smooth runners there must always be a few wrecks and failures."

Fanny yawned and ended it with a forced, half apologetic laugh.

"Fanny," said the fireman, "I want to ask you one question before I go, and I would like a frank, honest answer."

"Well?"

"Do you love me?"

"I have said that I did."

"And you have always shown that you do not."

"Then why do you ask me?"

"For your answer. If you can say truthfully that you love me now, I shall trust you."

"Oh, you don't need to trust me if you don't want to! I am sure I never asked you to. Good night!"

"Fanny," exclaimed the fireman as he stretched his arms over the gate, "is this the end of my dreams?"

The girl twisted the little gold engagement ring from her finger and thrust it across the gate. Now the fireman wondered that he had not noticed till now the beautiful diamond that sparkled even in the pale moonlight.

Fanny had just returned from the little stony graveyard that had grown up with the town. Her husband, the Mint Julep man, was no more. His light had gone out in the midst of delirium, and his body had been sent back east to his people.

Suddenly she caught sight of some men carrying a man on a stretcher from the train across the river to the hospital.

"Engineer hurt!" shouted a freckled boy, going past the cottage proudly spreading the news.

"Who is it?"

"Dunno," said the boy, without slowing down.

"Yes, it's him," said Fanny's mother, coming back from one of the neighbors. "Caught under his engine; leg broken and badly scalded."

Fanny put her chin in her hand, and the tears began to run down her pale face. If only she could go to him. But she had no right. Besides, he might not care to have her. She had seen him but once since they parted in the moonlight at the gate. That was the day her baby was buried.

It was a week later that the kind hearted surgeon allowed her to visit the injured man.

"Ah, Fanny, don't you think you could learn to love me again?"

"I have never ceased to love you," she said, with her honest eyes upon his. "It was all a mistake—an awful, horrid mistake."

"Here, here," said the doctor, entering. "If you're going to cry, I'll send you away."

"No, you won't," said the engineer, smiling and taking her hand in his. "She's going to be my nurse."—Penny Pictorial Magazine.

WOMEN AND JEWELS.

Jewels, candy, flowers, man—that is the order of a woman's preferences. Jewels form a magnet of mighty power to the average woman. Even the greatest of all jewels, health, is often ruined in the strenuous efforts to make or save the money to purchase them. If a woman will risk her health to get a coveted gem, then let her fortify herself against the insidious consequences of coughs, colds and bronchial affections by the regular use of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup. It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the dread disease from the system. It is not a cure-all, but it is a certain cure for coughs, colds and all bronchial troubles. You can get all of Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at the Wilson-Jenkins Drug Co.'s store, Bryan. THE FIREMAN'S ...WOOLING

Chose Not Wisely.

"Sit here, please," said Fanny as she stood with her shapely hands upon the back of a chair that she had drawn a little way out from the table. It was the boast of the proprietor that he had the handsomest lot of waitresses on the road, and the queen of the collection was Fanny McCann. That's how she happened to be head waitress, for she could not know much of the business. She had come to the place partly because her widowed mother was poor and partly to gratify a consuming desire to pose as the prettiest girl there, for she had been consulting her mirror.

The fireman frowned, but took a seat next to the proprietor of the Mint Julep. The fireman's face, newly washed and hardly rubbed, glistened in the glare of the electric light, and the same light played upon the jeweled hands and immaculate shirt front of the Julep man. The fireman bowed coldly, and the other, feeling a certain superiority in the matter of dress and personal appearance, smiled.

The head waitress, taking a position at one of the windows, stood looking at the two men, both of whom had made love to her. She had purposely seated them so as to get their faces in one frame, as it were, for she had been unable to forsake one and cleave to the other. She respected the fireman—she had loved him once and had acknowledged it to him—but she was dazzled by the handsome, well-groomed proprietor of the Mint Julep. Once or twice the fireman ventured to look up, but each time he saw her gazing upon his rival, and his heart was filled with dread.

"What time shall I call?" he asked as Fanny handed him his ticket.

"Not before 9. I detest being first in a ballroom."

"Suppose we say 8:30? It will be 9 by the time we reach the hall."

"Nine," said Fanny, nodding at the Julep man as he passed out, with his chin-chin thrown gracefully over his shoulders.

"But I'm on the reception committee."

"Then go and 'recep' and come back for me. I shan't leave the house before 9. My, how gay you are!"

The fireman went out with a heavy heart. Fanny was getting on. She had not used such language to him before, and it cut him to the quick. He remembered how he had begged her to keep out of the eating house and tried to hint to her mother that the place was full of lures.

"It's only a short step in the direction of danger," he said. "A public dinner room, camp meeting, the skating rink, and—"

"Stop," said Fanny's mother. "I will not have you hint even that Fanny is capable of being bad."

And so the fireman had been powerless to prevent the pure young girl from putting herself in this position.

Promptly at 9 o'clock he called for Fanny. She would be out in a moment, her mother said.

During the half hour in which he waited for the expiration of a woman's "moment" the fireman noticed a number of new pieces of furniture; also he noticed that Fanny's mother was a little reserved. Fanny herself, while amply deliberate, was irritable and nervous. Conversation seemed to go slowly with them, like a heavy train on an up grade.

When they entered the ballroom, the fiddlers were already fiddling, and they fell in line for the opening walk round.

Over in one end of the hall there was a bank of plants and ferns, loaned by leading citizens for the firemen's annual ball, and just in front of the oasis stood the Julep man, immaculate as ever and wearing the only evening dress suit in the room.

He was radiant and all the more so by comparison, for not a few of the respectable suits worn by the firemen and their friends were beginning to take on that unmistakable shine that comes with age.

"Oh, Isaac," exclaimed Mrs. Wolfstine to her husband, "what a beautiful young lady! Who is she?"

"She ees not what you say—a lady. She is waitress from zee eating house."

"And who is the handsome gentleman writing on her card?"

"He ees not one gentleman, my dear. He ees zee proprietor of zee Mint 'Ulep."

Now Mrs. Wolfstine marveled that this man should be there dancing with the daughters of the best families in the growing western town. But why should he not be there? Every fireman on the division had sold or tried to sell him a ticket for the annual ball.

The fireman was surprised upon taking Fanny's card to find that his rival had already written upon it.

A half an hour later he took the card again to select a number and found the face of it black with "Julep, Julep, Julep."

This man had been called by that name so much that he had come to answer to it and write it. Indeed, few people in the place knew that he had another name.

It was two hours after midnight when the fireman opened the gate in front of the little frame cottage where the girl's mother lived.

"Well," said the girl, putting the gate between them, "was the ball a success?"

"For some people it was a decided success."

"And for others?"

"A dat failure!"

"That's too bad," said Fanny, with provoking carelessness.

"Oh, I don't know. Where there are so many smooth runs and smooth runners there must always be a few wrecks and failures."

Fanny yawned and ended it with a forced, half apologetic laugh.

"Fanny," said the fireman, "I want to ask you one question before I go, and I would like a frank, honest answer."

"Well?"

"Do you love me?"

"I have said that I did."

"And you have always shown that you do not."

"Then why do you ask me?"

"For your answer. If you can say truthfully that you love me now, I shall trust you."

"Oh, you don't need to trust me if you don't want to! I am sure I never asked you to. Good night!"

"Fanny," exclaimed the fireman as he stretched his arms over the gate, "is this the end of my dreams?"

The girl twisted the little gold engagement ring from her finger and thrust it across the gate. Now the fireman wondered that he had not noticed till now the beautiful diamond that sparkled even in the pale moonlight.

Fanny had just returned from the little stony graveyard that had grown up with the town. Her husband, the Mint Julep man, was no more. His light had gone out in the midst of delirium, and his body had been sent back east to his people.

Suddenly she caught sight of some men carrying a man on a stretcher from the train across the river to the hospital.

"Engineer hurt!" shouted a freckled boy, going past the cottage proudly spreading the news.

"Who is it?"

"Dunno," said the boy, without slowing down.

"Yes, it's him," said Fanny's mother, coming back from one of the neighbors.

"Caught under his engine; leg broken and badly scalded."

Fanny put her chin in her hand, and the tears began to run down her pale face. If only she could go to him. But she had no right. Besides, he might not care to have her. She had seen him but once since they parted in the moonlight at the gate. That was the day her baby was buried.

It was a week later that the kind hearted surgeon allowed her to visit the injured man.

"Ah, Fanny, don't you think you could learn to love me again?"

"I have never ceased to love you," she said, with her honest eyes upon his.

"It was all a mistake—an awful, horrid mistake."

"Here, here," said the doctor, entering. "If you're going to cry, I'll send you away."

"No, you won't," said the engineer, smiling and taking her hand in his.

"She's going to be my nurse."—Penny Pictorial Magazine.
